

Vision

Young people with experience in out-of-home care should not have to carry their stories as a burden, but instead draw strength and self-efficacy from them. Care Leaving Coaching™ is a multidimensional educational and consulting program that supports (emerging) adults in experiencing socio-emotional belonging and in finding their own path with autonomy, responsibility and self-determination.

Care leaving requires a shift in systems, structures, and discourse: away from deficit-based narratives and towards recognition, responsibility, education, and appreciation. The voices of young people must be brought to the center – they need to be felt, not ignored, marginalized, or silenced.

I guide and support you

In Care Leaving Coaching™, I support Young people with experience in out-of-home care in consciously shaping their personal and professional development – with a focus on individual resources, biographical disruptions, and structural challenges. Together, we strengthen resilience, sharpen perspectives, and develop achievable next steps.

Topics such as housing, finances, health behavior, social relationships, educational pathways and career orientation, processing of biographical experiences, socio-emotional belonging, self-care, and financial independence are all given space – alongside a metacognitive peer exchange on equal footing.

The Care Leaving Coaching™ is understood as a multidimensional educational and consulting process, in which learning how to learn plays a central role – with the goal of fostering individual self-efficacy and building sustainable educational trajectories.

I offer structure, reflection, and impulses for your journey – toward a self-determined life in connection with yourself and society.

Make use of my expertise

Every person is oriented toward growth – and this applies equally to all group members with diverse existential backgrounds. The collective institutional trauma in the context of out-of-home care often acts as an unresolved shadow that blocks development: when one part of the whole refuses to feel and another part is excluded, the entire system suffers. But self-healing and transformation require all parts.

The Care Leaving Coaching™ is based on my research. It creates a safe space where Young people with experience in out-of-home care can reflect on, integrate, and transform collective, transgenerational and individual experiences into strength. The goal is to experience belonging and to rewrite one's own story with self-determination.
